SUMMARY

Discussions between USDA and European Community and member state plant health officials led to a temporary relaxation of the restrictive phytosanitary regulations covering soybean seed exports for planting in 1989.

At the recent Mexican Seed Trade Association meeting issues related to potential U.S. planting seed exports were discussed.

Morocco seeks sources of supply for specific varieties of forage and wheat seed.

USDA laboratories tested 100,000 tons of wheat seed destined for Saudi Arabia.

Credit lines for planting seeds under USDA's Credit Guarantee program now total $24.9 million for 9 countries.

U.S planting seed exports during July-September 1988 reached $72.0 million. The most important regional market for the July-September period is North America, representing 29 percent of total exports for the period.

Mexico continued its tradition as the top market for U.S. planting seeds in the July-September period.

Forage and turf seed exports for the July-September period climbed 34 percent over the previous year to $16.9 million. Exports of vegetable seeds also climbed 34 percent in value over last year -- to 34.1 million. Field crop seed exports fell 9 percent in value to $12.7 million.

FOREIGN DEVELOPMENTS

European Community Phytosanitary Restriction Update

Discussions between USDA and European Community and member state plant health officials led to a temporary relaxation of the restrictive phytosanitary regulations covering soybean seed exports for planting in 1989 to France and Italy. Important assistance was provided by French seed traders who were able to convince French officials that the strict regulations would stop all imports of soybean seed. Additional meetings will be held in the spring to iron out a permanent system that will give the Europeans the plant health protection they need, yet not cut off the supply. Information provided by U.S. scientists continues to be the central focus of the issue.

The Mexican Seed Trade Association held its annual convention during the 1988 U.S. Thanksgiving week. One issue discussed was that certified seed use is declining in Mexico. No reasons were given. U.S. seed company subsidiaries expressed approval of the Mexican government decision to no longer require import permits for seed. However, there is some belief that plant health regulations are being used to slow imports. It was also alleged that varieties are being removed from the approved import list with no warning or reason given. These two complaints reportedly cause uncertainty in the trade and thus reduce potential U.S. seed exports to Mexico. The Office of the U.S. Agricultural Counselor in Mexico is looking into these problems. Material about the credit guarantee program was presented by the U.S. Agricultural Attache. So far, registrations of planting seed sales to Mexico under the credit guarantee program have reached $1.0 million, half the available line (see the Credit Guarantee section).

The Agricultural Marketing Service, USDA, reports that their seed testing laboratories tested about 100,000 tons of wheat seed destined to Saudi Arabia. Saudi Arabia has had rather strict phytosanitary regulations on the books for some time but did not chose not to closely enforce them until 1987. In 1987 many exporters were taken by surprise when the Saudi Arabian government tested incoming shipments of wheat seed and rejected a number of lots because of the presence of quarantine diseases. Much of that seed was burned.

Credit Guarantee Status

The following table contains the latest information concerning planting seed credit lines for the 1989 Fiscal Year credit guarantee program. The total line is up substantially from the $3.5 million reported in FFVS 3-88. While total guarantees are below the $30.0 million reached in fiscal year 1988, registrations are moving faster.

Marketing Opportunities

The U.S. Agricultural counselor in Morocco reports that various government agencies are seeking sources of supply for seed. The agricultural district of Ouarzate, an over-grazed, semi-arid region, has an extensive rangeland project underway and needs the following varieties of seed: Kochia prostrata, Salsola orientalis, Salsola rigida, Halothamum subaphyllum, and Haloxylon aphyllum. SODEA, a para-statal company, needs a wheat variety resistant to high salinity levels in soil and water. The supplier will need to provide information about the variety. Anyone wishing more information should write the agricultural counselor directly at: Office of the Agricultural Counselor, U.S. Embassy - Rabat, APO New York 09284; or Telex: 31005.

U.S. TRADE DEVELOPMENTS

DATA REVISION

The Foreign Agricultural Service recently upgraded its computer equipment. This allowed an opportunity to closely scrutinize the programming used to generate the report published in this circular series. In addition to reformatting slightly the seed groupings and regions of the world, discrepancies were discovered in the data. The data discrepancies were limited to the aggregate seed group "Other Seeds," where inclusion of some minor grains for consumption had been included. The effect was to inflate slightly the volume and value of seed exports. For example, for July-September 1988, the old version shows $73.262 million and 42,238 tons while the new program shows $72.010 million and 34,622 tons. The new system has space to keep more data on-line. Only the latest five years of data was available before but now seed data back to January 1967 can be accessed. Because of this, a special section has been included in this circular which includes the equivalent of Tables 1 and 2 (U.S. Seed Exports by Kind and by Destination) beginning with July-September 1967. In future circulars, similar tables which match the current period will be provided. Data matching Table 3 (U.S. Seed Exports by Kind and Destination) is available but will not be published. Anyone desiring data by country for a particular kind of seed should write to the address printed on page 2 of this circular.

HARMONIZED TARIFF SCHEDULE

The Harmonized Tariff schedule became effective January 1, 1988. It will affect the data in the circular containing the July-March data. The multilateral harmonized system negotiations and U.S. policies toward trade data will cause some additional revisions to seed trade data. The major change in the export report will be the inclusion for the first time of wheat seed and sunflowerseed for planting. The Census Bureau has internal policies concerning publishing of data for tariff lines where there is only one or very few exporters. This may affect wheat seed. FAS is exploring this issue.

Trade Summary

U.S planting seed exports during July-September 1988 reached $72.0 million. This new record for the period is 10 percent higher than the previous record of $65.2 million set in 1983. All major classes except the new grouping "Field Crop Seed" showed increases in value over the same period in 1987. See Graph 1 for a comparison of exports by major class for the July-September period since 1967.

The most important regional market for the July-September period is North America, representing 29 percent of total exports for the period. Although historically the European Community is the second most important regional market, South America edged it out in the current period. Two other important and rapidly growing regional markets are the Middle East and Other Asia. See Graph 2 for exports by major regional market. NOTE: Other Asia on Graph 2 is the total of three Asian regions in Table 2.

Mexico continued its tradition as the top market for U.S. planting seeds in the July-September period. Exports to Mexico declined 6 percent to $15.4 million from the previous period. Japan kept the second-place ranking earned a year ago. Exports to Japan climbed 17 percent from the mark set in 1987 to $7.7 million. Canada was third again at $5.5 million, 41 percent over a year ago. See Graphs 2A, 2B, and 2C for exports to the top 15 markets for July-September 1988 compared to previous years.

Forage and turf seed export results for the July-September period climbed 34 percent in value over the previous year to $16.9 million. Only four kinds of seeds in this class declined in value. See Graph 1A comparing major forage and turf kinds.

Exports of Vegetable Seeds also climbed 34 percent in value over last year -- to 34.1 million. See Graph 1B comparing major vegetable kinds.

Field Crop seed exports fell 9 percent in value to $12.7 million. Corn seed exports climbed 52 percent despite a 62-percent decline for the European community, usually the best market. The decline may have been the result of uncertainties about the phytosanitary situation regarding Stewart's wilt. Corn seed exports were aided by the need for seed companies to ship parent stock to winter grow out areas such as Argentina and Chile because of the drought that ravaged 1988 U.S. production. Grain sorghum seed exports declined in value again mainly due to a 96-percent decline in shipments to Venezuela. To all intents and purposes, Venezuela can no longer be considered a major grain sorghum seed market. Exports of soybean seed declined 83 percent in value mainly due to the uncertainty of the European Community phytosanitary regulation situation. Regulations in the the two most important soybean seed markets, Italy and France, have been temporarily eased. This should have a positive effect on shipments in December 1988 and January-February 1989. If wheat seed and sunflowerseed for planting are included in the July-March data because of the changes mandated by the switch to the Harmonized Tariff Schedule, they will be included in the field crop seed class. See Graph 1C comparing field crop seeds.

The "Other Seed" class contains kinds of seed that do not easily fit into other categories. There is no intention to discuss the class in terms of totals. The individual kinds may be discussed when or if there is reason to point them out.
